

The Boston Post seems to feel thankful that the Ohio Convention was no worse, but from the record of the candidate it is difficult to see how it could have been worse than it is.

Mr. Powell, the Democratic nominee for Governor in 1872, was easily defeated by Governor Allen in 1872, and for Attorney-General in 1875. He will be as readily defeated again in 1887. The people of Ohio have no use for Mr. Powell in office.

The Democratic editors of Indiana held a meeting last week at which one of their number, Mr. Ray, of Shelbyville, made a bitter attack upon the President and his cabinet, stating that Cleveland could not carry Indiana if nominated.

The New York Graphic says "the world never saw a more loyal party than the Democratic party." The man who penned that sentiment says the Lowell Courier would be ready to assert that there never was a plainer a personage as the devil.

The New York Times says "the Blaine situation is ticklish and painful." It is ticklish, however, that no one outside the little band of Mugwumps and the Democratic party is in the least disturbed. They seem to have a monopoly of the anxiety on that score.

What have the Mugwumps organs to say about the "unpleasant activity" of Rabin, Higgins, Thomas and other government officials in the Baltimore primaries? Why is it that President Cleveland permits these things if he is sincere in his reform pretensions as the Mugwumps claim?

The Democrats now charge General Felt with disreputable acts while he was in the army. It is worthy of note that after he left the army the Iowa Democrats ran him for Governor, and the Democratic press of the country warmly supported him, and praised him as "one of the bravest and best of the Union soldiers."

The count of the cash in the Treasury shows that whereas in twenty years of Republican rule there occurred a shortage of two cents, in two years of Democratic rule there has been a shortage of $20. The Republican shortage of two cents was afterward found in a dark corner of a Treasury vault, and it is probable that the Democratic shortage of $20 may be found in a dark corner of some spoliars' pocket.

The Ohio Democratic convention once more brought out the Federal officials in full force and they worked early and late to defeat the candidacy of Mr. Campbell who is opposed to the Administration. When President Cleveland issued his order about government employees abstaining from political manipulation he of course did not mean for them to permit the people to get in any way against the Administration. That is different, you know.

George William Curtis is getting to be as changeable as a coy maiden. It was only a day or two since he was mourning that reform had made no progress under the Cleveland Administration which had made a clean sweep of the country, but in the last edition of Up to the Mountains he asserts that the Mugwump confidence in Mr. Cleveland has been generally vindicated. Mr. Curtis should get on one side or the other of this Administration and stick there for at least a week.

The President has decided to appoint William A. Freer, of Louisiana, as Supervisor of Arkansas to succeed Mr. Bell. The most significant feature of the appointment is that Freer is a strong Eastern man and was backed by the Senator for the place. It is believed that the President and Mr. Freer have had an understanding. Senator Freer can control the Louisiana delegates in the next National Democratic Convention and the President can no longer afford to ignore him. It is a strong indication that the President is working for a second term and means to pull every wire. It is noticeable that Freer is an ex-confederate, as is Freer, the chief clerk who succeeded a gallant Union soldier from Maine.

A number of the business men of Buffalo have entered in a scheme to utilize the water power of the Niagara River at or near that city. They propose to offer a price of $100,000 for the best plan of appropriating that power as may be needed for mechanical purposes. Inventors of engines in all parts of the world will be free to compete. A considerable amount of money, it is said, has already been subscribed. The project is an enterprising one, and it is to be hoped that it will be successful. The same idea is practically carried out the little city of Schenectady, two miles above the Falls of the Rhine. At the lower end of the city the current, or as much of it as is wanted, is turned on a small array of turbine wheels, and the power is distributed by a large system of towers and belting along the line of the water front, whence it is taken off laterally to the numerous factories using it. A modification of this simple system might be needed at Buffalo, no doubt, owing to the greater difficulties of the larger river.

"The Difference" Between Fact and Fiction.

The Boston Herald in the latter part of June made a conspicuous editorial paragraph headed "The Difference," in which it said that while the Republican Club of New York adopted resolutions "strongly condemning" the proposed surrender of the Battle-Flags, "the Army of the Potomac" had a resolution relating to the subject. The Herald thereupon sententiously remarked:

This shows the difference between the veterans and the politicians. The veterans have had war enough, and are glad that it is over, but the politicians are not really weary to fight, but they are deadly in need of votes.

We have been wishing to see whether the Herald would as conspicuously inform its readers that the telegraphed report that the Society of the Army of the Potomac at its annual reunion "tabled" the resolutions referring to the proposed surrender of the Battle-Flags was a sheer and unqualified falsehood by everybody, and that the resolutions denouncing the proposed surrender of the Battle-Flags were offered by a veteran who had both legs shot off in battle, and were adopted by the great gathering of soldiers with the "wildest enthusiasm," only one person attempting any excuse for the Administration.

Now will the Herald have the goodness to publish the resolutions that the Army of the Potomac actually did adopt with such unanimity and emphasis, and then give its readers a revised version of its opinion of "the difference between the veterans and the politicians" in regard to the attempted outrage of surrendering the trophies of National triumph and treason.

The President's Condemnation.

Down to the present time the special Mugwump campaign who stood sponsors for President Cleveland's pledges of civil service reform, have persistently asserted his fidelity to his promises. Others have seen the clean sweep steadily going forward; most observers have known that partisanship was swaying the appointments as completely as ever before in our history; but during all this time the Mugwump newspapers have been as strongly biased to the truth. At last, however, even they are silenced. The violence is too direct and conclusive to be disregarded. The undisputed exhibit that of the 55,000 postmasters 47,000 have been changed, and that the same overturning has been made in the whole range of the public service battles defeat and defeat answer. Mr. Curtis is compelled to explain in Harper's Weekly: "If the statement regarding the fourth-class post-office is approximately accurate, there has been a clean sweep of that service in two years. If that hypothesis is an Administration who has led to prevent a clean sweep under any successor; and where, then, so far as this matter is concerned, is the gain for reform?"

Where, indeed? Mr. Curtis seems to be startled by the evidence that, in spite of all his pretensions, partisanship has dominated this Administration as thoroughly as any that has preceded it. And in the face of this fact what is his warrant for still saying that "the head is sincerely interested in reform?" A case is known by its fruits. A President must be known by his acts. Whatever his words, it is his deeds that count. This clean sweep has not been made without the President's knowledge and sanction. It marks the Presidential appointments as such as any other part of the service at hand is directly and immediately responsible for all of it. He came into the President's chair with the most distinct and solemn pledge of civil service reform which any President had made a long while. The fact had already been placed upon the statute books. Other Presidents, without any such explicit promises or any such direct statutory obligation, had moved along with advancing public sentiment. But more than a predecessor, Mr. Cleveland was committed by his own professions, by the pledges of his sponsors and by the letter and spirit of the law, to a faithful application of the reform.

And now the actual result which compels Mr. Curtis to declare that "the civil service will be a complete failure; as under any recent Administration," is the brand of recalcitancy upon Mr. Cleveland. It shows that he has promised one thing and done another. How is it to be reconciled with any faith in the sincerity and integrity of his profession?

As it is he stands before the country with his pledges broken beyond repair and with his most responsible and creditable sponsors humiliated and at a loss. They have not yet exhibited the frankness to condemn and rebuke his betrayal; but when they are constrained to ask, "where is the gain for reform?" they declare that "the fact is for every reason to be deplored." It amounts to the severest condemnation. In the light of this proof of Mr. Cleveland's faithlessness to his professions, the one solitary claim made on his behalf falls to pieces.

Blaine in the Pivotal States.

From the Chicago Tribune. Just how much reliance can be placed on the Toledo Blade's Presidential poll of its weekly subscribers as straws showing the way the wind blows is impossible to say. An inspection, however, shows that Mr. Blaine leads his chief competitor, Senator Sherman, even in Ohio, and that preference for Mr. Blaine is plainly indicated in the pivotal States—viz., New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Indiana, and California. The returns of these States are tabulated as follows:

	Blaine	Sherman	Chicago	Albany
New York	162	131	22	3
New Jersey	162	131	22	3
Connecticut	162	131	22	3
Indiana	162	131	22	3
California	162	131	22	3
Total	1,176	466	103	13

It will thus be seen that among Republicans Mr. Blaine is strongest where the stress of the battle is to be most severely felt, and that he is by all odds regarded as the strongest and most available candidate by his party friends throughout the country. The above is the substance of comments on the above subject in the Republican of New York.

Republicans express themselves in his behalf in sober judgment, and not from any mere temporary impulse. He certainly has done nothing recently to give the popular heart. He has made an effort to keep himself before the people. He has gone out of the country for rest and recreation, leaving his duties as related to him to take care of itself. He is doing nothing to secure the Presidential nomination. He has been defeated once for the Presidency, an event that usually shadows the prospect for a nomination. He has been repeatedly assailed by a partisan press. No American has been more bitterly assailed, and his reputation has been more completely destroyed, than he is now.

The Work of Commissioner Matthews.

Commissioner Matthews having visited Lewiston and Auburn, sends his paper, the Aroostook Republican, an interesting account of his trip and what he found, from which we make the following extracts: The Commissioner was pleased to learn, at his recent visit, that the relations of the manufacturing establishment and their employees are generally pleasant and satisfactory. Besides "intervening" he has seen the homes of the operatives and conversed with many of them, and the general good condition of the working men and women, as well as the excellent character of the law, were very apparent. "The new law meets with great favor. The Commissioner met with a cordial reception from all with whom he came in contact, and he wishes to express special thanks to John Garon, Esq., an intelligent English-born, once an operative in mills, and now a prosperous merchant, who has taken so much interest in labor questions and the improvement of the condition of working men. Mr. Garon is a useful citizen of the State, and his influence in proper ways. The Lewiston Co-operative Society was organized three years ago, in a place where, to place workers in the hands of the working classes the means to control their own labor, thereby removing the cause of their antagonism between capital and labor, which so often produces the most disastrous results. This society opened a grocery store on the Rockdale plan, and its success is proved by the fact that 10 per cent. dividends on profits on shares have been declared for the past three years. Goods are sold at the general market prices, and thus no competition is as needed. The society has overcome the difficulties of the war store accommodations and has now nearly completed a large building at a cost of between $5,000 and $6,000. While co-operative distribution may be made successful, pure co-operation in the production of manufactures meets with only obstacles which render failure almost inevitable. Profit sharing, or dividing some of the principles of co-operation with the ordinary methods, is now on trial in the United States. It is a very pleasant hour with Mr. Chapman, Esq., one of the largest manufacturers of shoes in the country. A year ago last April, Mr. Chapman announced his intention to make the experience of profit sharing, and a year's trial resulted in a dividend in April of 4 per cent. on the amount of wages earned by his employees during the year. The amount of wages paid for labor was $288,244.67 and the dividends on profits resulting to labor amounted to $11,582.78. Mr. Chapman formed the Committee on Profit Sharing, and the dividends on profits resulting to labor amounted to $11,582.78. Hood's Sarsaparilla

For some little time after the evening of the 10th of July, I did not happen to meet the Brackells, so that I could not judge from personal observation how far Hood's Sarsaparilla had been successful in curing the disease which reached me pointed to the conclusion that she had not dropped that foolish idea of her own, and was not to be trusted for a moment that she intended doing so. Jim, who had returned to London after a flying visit to Birmingham, a nurse, and by an account of a woman named which he had felt it his duty to address to Lady Bracknell and of the manner in which she had been treated, had been received. I expressed much surprise and congratulated Jim upon his having found the remedy which he had been seeking for so long, and which he had been told was the only one that would cure him. "One can't mix the eyes," he explained, "and, as you know, I have good cause to distrust my eyes." He then told me that he had been told that the only way to cure him was to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and that he had been told that it was the only one that would cure him. "I don't want other people to suffer through me," he said, "I thought I might perhaps be disposed to admit that one of my friends, a man named, had been told that the only way to cure him was to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and that he had been told that it was the only one that would cure him. I don't want other people to suffer through me, I thought I might perhaps be disposed to admit that one of my friends, a man named, had been told that the only way to cure him was to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and that he had been told that it was the only one that would cure him."
